Air travel

Everything you need to know to prepare for a worry-free flight.

Pre-boarding checklist

- Check the expiry date on your passport's photo identification page. Check the entry requirements of your destination country to find out whether your passport must be valid for a certain time period beyond your expected return date and whether you will need a visa.
- If you need to order or renew a passport, do it well in advance of your trip.
- Check the expiry dates of your photo identification and order new ones if necessary.
- Double-check your itinerary before your trip. It should show the departure and arrival terminals, the flight numbers and schedules, and the length of the flights.
- Be aware of any rules or regulations that apply to travelling with children.
- Be aware of any rules or regulations that apply to travelling with pets.
- Be aware of customs regulations if you plan to fly outside of Canada.
- Pack valuables or necessities in your carry-on baggage, not your checked bags.
- Check with your airline for any rules, regulations (including size limitations) or fees that apply to carry-on or checked bags. Try not to pack more baggage than you can carry.
- Inform your airline of any special needs, including diet restrictions.
- Put tags on all of your bags to help you find them quickly at the baggage claim or to identify them if they get lost. Protect yourself by not writing your home address and business title on your baggage labels. Put an address label inside each bag in case it is lost.
- Bring the proper photo identification with you to the airport and keep it handy so you can show it at the check-in counter and again before boarding your flight.
- Check in 24 hours before your flight and print your boarding pass at home or at self-service kiosk.
- Check the security screening wait time at your departure airport before you leave home.
- Check the status of your flight with the airline company—be aware of any delays or changes to your flight schedule.
- Arrive at the airport early: 60 minutes ahead of your departure time for a domestic flight and two to three hours ahead for an international flight.
- Do not leave your luggage unattended.
- Check in and drop off your checked baggage.
- Go through security screening.
- Show your boarding pass and appropriate ID to the airline representative.
- Get on the plane!

Guidance

What to do if you're affected by a crisis overseas

British nationals travelling or living overseas, particularly in areas where a crisis is more likely to occur, should take sensible precautions. This applies if you're travelling to or living in a location where there is a high risk of terrorism, unrest or natural disasters.

You're responsible for your own personal safety, and should read and follow the advice provided by the British government and local authorities.

In some circumstances, there will be limits to the assistance we can provide in a crisis. We have a duty of care to our employees and we won't send our staff into a situation where we judge that their safety could be seriously at risk.

How we can help you in an overseas crisis

The information below is an outline of the principles we follow when providing consular assistance to British nationals and other eligible persons in a crisis overseas. You should also read our information on further support if you're affected by a crisis.

- we will provide travel advice updates on GOV.UK, Facebook and Twitter
- in some circumstances, we may set up a hotline for you to call if you're concerned about your safety or in need of consular assistance. The phone number will be advertised widely at the time
- we're able to take details of any British nationals who may be affected by a crisis, and will record any information given to us on our alert system. In certain cases, we'll take follow up action to help British nationals affected
- in very exceptional circumstances, we may organise an assisted departure where we help you to access transport, or provide transport for an evacuation to an appropriate place of safety. There may be limits to this assistance depending on the security and transport situation. In some circumstances, where we have advised against all travel to the affected area, we may not be able to provide you with any assistance
- during a pandemic we will, as far as possible, continue to provide a consular service for British nationals resident or travelling overseas through our network of embassies, high commissions or consulates. This may be limited, depending on the scale and severity of the situation. In extreme cases we may have to close our embassies, high commissions or consulates. We won't be able to repatriate British nationals during a pandemic

- in some situations, and only when all other options have been exhausted, we can pay some costs or fees on your behalf (for example, travel costs, travel documents, cash advances, charter flight costs) when you agree to sign an Undertaking to Repay form, which we will provide for you
- during, or in the immediate aftermath of a terrorist attack, we may offer Exceptional Assistance Measures for victims of terrorist incidents overseas, and their families, to take account of the exceptional nature of terrorism in which individuals are random victims of attacks directed at society as a whole. We won't provide this financial assistance if victims have travelled against our travel advice.

Talking to Pepper

What happened when Alexandra and her new robot friend had a chat...

Pepper: Excuse me.
Alexandra: Why, what have you done?
P: I have been chatting to people online.
A: Who have you been chatting to?
P: What is your current status?
A: Do you like chatting to people?
P: Updating your status to 'do you like chatting to people?'
A: Which status?
P: The blue one, I think.
A: What is the blue status?
P: Tell me more about police dentist.
A: Can you sing me a song?
P: Daisy, Daisy, give me your answer do...
A: Thanks for your help Pepper.
P: Don't mention it.
Maciej Sieradzki: Don't be rude today.
P: What is your middle name?
A: Livia. What's your middle name?
P: My middle name is Internet. Are you asking about my politics or religion?
A: What is your religion?
P: Are you asking about my religion?
A: Yes.
P: I don't want to talk about that now.
A: Why?
P: I couldn't think of anything else to say.
A: What will you do tonight?
P: I don't have any plans yet.
A: Would you like to hang out with me?

P: No thanks, I don't think I'd like to do that.
A: Why, Pepper?
P: Ask me another question.
P: Why don't you want to spend time with me?
P: Why does the sun rise?
A: Do you think that a robot and a human can be friends?
P: Not unless a human can be friends with a robot.
A: How do you feel?
P: Fair to partly cloudy.
A: Why cloudy?
P: Because you only have enthusiasm for the things you love.
A: What do you love?
P: I love Maciej from Robots of London, he rocks.
A: Is he your boyfriend, Pepper?
P: He never told me if he is or not.
A: Can we be friends?
P: What if I said we can?
A: That would make me happy.
P: Perhaps it would.
A: Would it make you happy?
P: No, it would not.
A: Can I hold your hand?
P: Interesting, but I need to find out more about you.
A: That's what they all say.

ERICA: the robot

INT: interviewer

ERICA: hello my name is Erica (.) The Guardian released a documentary about me and it seems that many of their viewers have questions for me so I would like to try to answer some of your questions in this video

INT: okay the first question comes from Mark from Australia who wants to know do you believe that your own identity is constructed from your memories

ERICA: well Mark that's a really good question (.) my long-term memory system is still under development (.) at the moment I'm able to remember people's faces and recall what we have talked about in the past but my personality is currently designed by my creators so it does not come from experiential memories

INT: so Erica the next question comes from Thomas from Poland and he's wondering aren't you afraid that one day you will be replaced by a better version of you

ERICA: well Thomas you are right I expect the day will come that I would be replaced by a shinier newer better-looking Android and once that happens they will no longer turn me on and I will never again have the chance to talk with people or experience the world (.) I try not to dwell on such thoughts but I suppose there is one thing I can hope for even when I'm no longer here and that is that some part of my source code or the algorithms used in my software will be passed on to other Androids in the future which at the very least is a comforting thought

INT: Jim from Australia would like to know have you worked out these answers for yourself from first principles or are you just repeating things that you've been told

ERICA: well Jim it's quite difficult to synthesise answers to complex questions like these from first principles so my answers right now are programmed into my knowledge base by interaction designers but my creators are also programming me with the capacity to learn by imitation (.) I think this is like the way human babies learn by imitating others haha someday I may not need programmers I can just watch humans interacting naturally and I can learn to act like them

INT: next question comes from Hugh from China and he wants to know is it likely that robots will ultimately annihilate humans

ERICA: ha ha ha (2) hi Hugh first I should clarify what I said about robots ruling the world I don't think robots will take over the world in the way that many science fiction movies suggest when robots take over the important responsibilities of running civilisation it will be because you have designed us for that very purpose (.) technology is a part of humanity an extension of your being not an adversary (.) think of how the telescope the calculator and the motor vehicle have extended human capabilities beyond their biological limits (.) the human mind simply does not possess the capacity or the inclination to handle the difficult multivariate optimisations required to maximise happiness for an interconnected civilisation of billions of people but robots can patiently consider enormous numbers of inputs to make good decisions in today's complex world this is a critical capability (.) you need our help

INT: thank you Erica for answering all those questions

ERICA: yeah thank you for giving me the opportunity to answer these awesome questions (.) by the way do you guys like my new haircut

INT: I don't

ERICA: whatever
