SECTION B: Post-1900 Drama

Answer ONE question from this section on your chosen drama text.

Begin your answer on page 23.

Top Girls – Caryl Churchill

EITHER

- 11 'Although many of the characters in Top Girls reflect deeply upon their pasts, the play's vitality springs from a hope that the present, and the future, can be better.'

In the light of this statement, explore the tension between the past, the present and the future in Churchill's play.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 11 = 25 marks)

OR

- 12 'One of the most important lines in the final act of Top Girls is "I'm not clever, just pushy".'

In the light of this statement, explore the extent to which Churchill's play supports the idea that being 'pushy' is a woman's best chance of achieving success.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 12 = 25 marks)

A Raisin in the Sun – Lorraine Hansberry

EITHER

- 13 'According to Walter, "Man say to his woman, I got me a dream. His woman say: Eat your eggs".'

In the light of this statement, explore attitudes to gender and the presentation of gender stereotypes in Hansberry's A Raisin in the Sun.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 13 = 25 marks)

OR

- 14 'The play's horizons are ever expanding: from a cramped apartment, we get a sense of Chicago, of the United States, and even of Africa.'

In the light of this statement, explore the ways in which Hansberry's A Raisin in the Sun invites consideration of the world beyond the Younger family home.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 14 = 25 marks)

Answer ONE question from this section on your chosen drama text.

Begin your answer on page 23.

Death of a Salesman – Arthur Miller

EITHER

- 15 'Arthur Miller is often criticised for his plays' two-dimensional portrayals of women, and Death of a Salesman is, in the view of many, notable for the lack of depth in the female characters.'

In the light of this statement, explore the presentation of women in Death of a Salesman.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 15 = 25 marks)

OR

- 16 'Miller's Death of a Salesman often discomforts its audiences, because we are not sure whether we should feel pity for Willy or not.'

In the light of this statement, explore the idea that Willy is a character who does, or does not, deserve pity.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

A Streetcar Named Desire – Tennessee Williams

EITHER

- 17 'Stanley is the villain of the play, but we nonetheless identify with him, because like us he wishes to uncover the truth that Blanche has been concealing.'

In the light of this statement, explore the ways in which Williams presents Stanley as a complex character in A Streetcar Named Desire.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 17 = 25 marks)

OR

- 18 'The ending of A Streetcar Named Desire is not predictable – but on reflection, we may feel it was inevitable.'

In the light of this statement, explore Williams' crafting of the ending of the play.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 18 = 25 marks)

Answer ONE question from this section on your chosen drama text.

Begin your answer on page 23.

Waiting for Godot – Samuel Beckett

EITHER

- 19 'Pozzo and Lucky's arrival is heralded by a "terrible cry", but one way of thinking about Waiting for Godot is that the entire play is just one long and profoundly terrible cry: the cry of humanity when faced with the futility of existence and the human condition.'

In the light of this statement, explore the idea that Beckett's play can be understood as a lament for the human condition.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.

(Total for Question 19 = 25 marks)

OR

- 20 'Waiting for Godot will make you laugh. But you will never be quite sure of what you are laughing at.'

In the light of this statement, explore the idea that even the comic aspects of Beckett's play can be unsettling for its audiences.

In your answer, you must consider relevant contextual factors.
