Section A

Answer Question 01.

Source A

From a pamphlet by John Lilburne and others imprisoned in the Tower of London as Levellers, April 1649. This was smuggled out of their prison for distribution to Londoners.

We never had it in our thoughts to level men's estates, it being our aim that every man should, with security, enjoy his property.

It is claimed we have been agents for the King, and now, for the Queen; that we are atheists and indeed anything that is hateful and evil.

All our actions show, when they are rightly considered, that we are for government and against popular confusion. Our aim all along has been to reduce government to as near perfection as might be. We know well the evil of men's hearts and that there could be no life without government. Though tyranny is excessively bad, yet confusion is worse. It is somewhat strange then, that because we have laboured so earnestly for a good government, some say we would wish to have none at all.

We have been misrepresented to the world, and must suffer till God sees it fitting to clear such harsh judgements, because of which, many good men keep a distance from us.

From the 'Women's Leveller Petition' presented to the Rump Parliament, May 1649.

Since we are assured of our creation in the image of God, as equal unto men and worthy of an equal share in the freedoms of this commonwealth, so, we cannot but wonder and grieve that we should appear so despicable in your eyes as to be thought unworthy to represent our grievances to you. Have we not an equal interest with the men of this nation in those liberties and securities contained in the Petition of Right and other good laws of the land? Are any of our lives, liberties or goods to be taken from us more than from men? Do you imagine us to be so foolish or not to be wholly aware when daily those strong defences of our peace and welfare are broken down and trod underfoot by force and arbitrary power? Would you have us keep in our houses, when honest men are fetched out of their beds to prison by soldiers?

Source C

From the pamphlet, 'The Case of the Commonwealth of England Stated, or, the necessity of a submission to the present government', by a professional propagandist employed by Parliament, 1650.

The very settlement the Levellers want, would put the commonwealth into an utter impossibility of settling the nation. The ignorant multitude do not understand the Levellers' Agreement of the People. They only see it as a way to increase their own fortune, out of other men's fortunes, and satisfy their natural appetites for envy, greed and revenge upon the honourable and wealthy. In consideration whereof, I give you the miserable inconveniences of that type of government, or rather confusion, as earnestly argued for by the Levelling party. 5

Such a democratic form that puts the whole brutish multitude into an equal exercise of the supreme authority, under pretence of maintaining liberty, is, in the judgement of all statesmen, actually the greatest threat to liberty. The Levellers would have uneducated persons without fortune put in authority, with the result that the commonwealth would not remain safe either in peace or war. The Levellers will proceed to introduce a complete equality so that we all live in common. 10
