Sources for use with Section A.

Source 1: From the Resolution passed by the All-India Congress Committee, 8 August 1942. The All-India Congress Committee was the decision-making body of the Indian National Congress. Here the Committee announces the 'Quit India' campaign.

Yet again, the All-India Congress Committee renews its appeal to Britain to grant freedom to India. The Committee believes that it is no longer justified in holding the Indian nation back from trying to achieve freedom from an imperialist and authoritarian British Government. Britain dominates India and prevents India from functioning in India's own interest and in the interest of all humanity. 5

The Committee resolves, therefore, to authorise the start of a mass struggle, using non-violent methods, in support of India's indisputable right to freedom and independence. India will make use of all the non-violent strength it has gathered under the leadership of Gandhi. The Committee requests Gandhi to take the lead and guide the nation in the steps to be taken. 10

Source 2: From a report in The Times newspaper, written by its reporter in India, 22 August 1876. The Times was a British newspaper. Here the reporter comments on the passing of the Royal Titles Act in March 1876.

It surprised us that there was not a public proclamation of the fact that Her Majesty had become Empress of India when the Royal Titles Bill became law. A notice of some kind was, I believe, read to the troops at the various military stations. However, apart from this, nothing was done. It seemed as if the Government of India viewed the change in the Royal title with the same lack of interest as did the general public. But, at last, a public notification has been issued. 15

The policy of substituting the title of Empress for the ancient and respected title of Queen is one of doubtful wisdom. In my opinion, the change has been received by the people of this country, or rather by the tiny number of them who have even heard of it, with feelings of great indifference. 20

However, now that the alteration in title has been made, it is right that it should be published with all the form and magnificence of oriental pageantry. Viceroy Lord Lytton's idea to hold an Imperial gathering at Delhi has met with general approval. Despite the current decline in trade, the Imperial celebration planned for next Christmas will probably be one of the most gorgeous spectacles that has ever been seen in India. 25
