Sources for use with Section A.

Source 1: From Helen Suzman, In No Uncertain Terms, published in 1993. Here, in her memoirs, Suzman comments on the Pass Laws and the operating of the Department of Bantu Administration in 1959. At that time, Suzman was a member of the United Party.

In June 1959, I received anonymously, a leaked document issued by the Department of Bantu Administration. The document gave instructions to the police that Blacks arrested under the Pass Laws should be persuaded to volunteer to work on farms instead of being prosecuted.

In Parliament, I launched a full-scale verbal attack on the Minister and Deputy Minister of the Department of Bantu Administration. The Deputy Minister was unaware that I had the departmental document in my possession. He denied that such a scheme existed, I challenged his claim and denounced the scheme as forced labour. I revealed the appalling conditions on the farms. The Blacks arrested for Pass Law infringements had been told to work on the farms or they would be sent to the infamous Baviaanspoort Prison. They were not told that, in reality, they would simply be fined or go to jail for a short time. The entire scheme was obviously illegal. 5 10

I kept up a constant criticism throughout the Bantu Administration Vote. One or two of my fellow United Party MPs were distinctly uneasy about my speeches, but I had my leader's support. The Minister announced that he would appoint a Commission of Inquiry. 15

Source 2: From a statement by former US President Bill Clinton, 2003. It was published in a book of Mandela's speeches. Clinton was President of the USA from 1993–2001. He met with Mandela on many occasions and supported Mandela's charities. Here he is commenting on Mandela's achievements.

I love and respect President Mandela very much, not least for his constant kindness and generosity to my family and me.

He has taught us so much. In his 27 years of imprisonment, Mandela endured physical and emotional abuse, isolation and humiliation. Somehow, his suffering purified his spirit. It gave him the strength to be a free man even behind bars, and to remain free of anger and hatred when he was at last released. 20

That freedom is reflected in the way he governed as President. He brought his oppressors into his government. He did everything he could to bring people together across racial, economic and political lines. 25

At 85, President Mandela is still encouraging better relationships between communities. This is shown especially amongst those that unite us in the battle against HIV/Aids, which he calls an 'even greater fight' than the struggle against apartheid. He gives us hope that our work to eradicate HIV/Aids from the world is not in vain. 30

Mandela's enduring legacy is that, under a crushing burden of oppression, he saw through differences, discrimination and destruction to embrace our common humanity. Thanks to his life and work, the rest of us are closer to embracing it too. 35
