

Oxford Cambridge and RSA

Friday 10 June 2022 – Morning

A Level History A

Y110/01 From Pitt to Peel 1783–1853

Time allowed: 1 hour 30 minutes

You must have:

- the OCR 12-page Answer Booklet

INSTRUCTIONS

- Use black ink.
- Write your answer to each question in the Answer Booklet. The question numbers must be clearly shown.
- Fill in the boxes on the front of the Answer Booklet.
- Answer Question 1 in Section A. Answer either Question 2 or Question 3 in Section B.

INFORMATION

- The total mark for this paper is 50.
- The marks for each question are shown in brackets [].
- Quality of extended response will be assessed in questions marked with an asterisk (*).
- This document has 4 pages.

ADVICE

- Read each question carefully before you start your answer.

Section APeel and the Age of Reform 1832–1853

Study the four sources and then answer Question 1.

- 1 Using these four sources in their historical context, assess how far they support the view that Peel's financial and economic policies enjoyed widespread support. [30]

Source A: A political diarist of the period, records his judgement on Peel's speech in the House of Commons on the Budget.

Peel brought forward his financial plans in a speech acknowledged by everybody to have been a masterpiece of financial statement. A few people expected an income tax, but the majority did not. Hitherto, the Opposition have been talking about opposing all taxes, but they have quite altered their tone. It is really remarkable to see the attitude Peel has taken in this Parliament and his complete mastery over both his friends and his foes. His own party have surrendered entirely. This great measure establishes his Government on such a foundation that only an accident can shake.

Charles Greville, The Greville Papers, 13 March 1842

Source B: In a letter written to her brother, the wife of a leading Whig politician expresses her views about Peel's Budget.

The Income Tax is sure to pass, though Peel has completely failed in proving any necessity for it. To make the deficiency greater Peel proposes to give up £600,000 of duty on timber, to which nobody had objected. There is a great fancy for the income tax amongst those who have no property. The Chartists particularly like its falling on the rich. The shopkeepers all dislike it very much and professional men, but the Irish are pleased at escaping it. Peel tries to please the strongest, and so get their support. The sugar people and the corn people were pleased with the tariff measures.

Lady Palmerston, The Letters of Lady Palmerston, 12 April 1843

Source C: A veteran free trader addresses an audience in Sunderland.

I feel grateful to the prime minister for what he has done according to his opportunities, for the benefit of the country. It was ever my opinion, that want of knowledge was not that minister's defect: and every step he has taken in the interests of free trade has shown it and will show it still. Depend upon it, he knows all about it as well as you or I do. Why shouldn't he? Has he not commercial blood in him, as we have? His position is difficult. We could find nobody to do so well for us if put into his place.

Colonel Thompson, speech, March 1845

Source D: In a portrait of mid-century England, a contemporary writer considers Peel's financial and economic policies.

The financial affairs of the nation brightened in a wonderful manner under the Peel government. Confidence revived; money became abundant; funds were easily raised in credit; and in 1844 there arose a fever of speculation in railway undertakings which proceeded gradually to a kind of universal madness, which was at its height in the summer of 1845. This madness the successful minister did nothing to check. No pen can describe the misery which resulted from the loss of inherited property or hard-earned savings invested in these undertakings, to the excess of which Peel lent such fatal encouragement.

William Johnston, England As It Is, published in 1851

4

Section BBritish Government in the Age of Revolution 1783–1832Answer ONE question.

- 2* 'Whig splits, during the period from 1790 to 1794, were the main reason why Pitt the Younger remained in power in the 1790s.' How far do you agree? [20]
- 3* To what extent was government policy responsible for the unrest during the period from 1815 to 1819? [20]

END OF QUESTION PAPER

OCR

Oxford Cambridge and RSA

Copyright Information

OCR is committed to seeking permission to reproduce all third-party content that it uses in its assessment materials. OCR has attempted to identify and contact all copyright holders whose work is used in this paper. To avoid the issue of disclosure of answer-related information to candidates, all copyright acknowledgements are reproduced in the OCR Copyright Acknowledgements Booklet. This is produced for each series of examinations and is freely available to download from our public website (www.ocr.org.uk) after the live examination series. If OCR has unwittingly failed to correctly acknowledge or clear any third-party content in this assessment material, OCR will be happy to correct its mistake at the earliest possible opportunity.

For queries or further information please contact The OCR Copyright Team, The Triangle Building, Shaftesbury Road, Cambridge CB2 8EA.

OCR is part of Cambridge University Press & Assessment, which is itself a department of the University of Cambridge.