An advertisement from a small drug company about its role in the production of penicillin, 1944.

During the Second World War (1939–45) the US government selected twenty companies to make penicillin to treat wounded American and British soldiers. This advertisement was published in 'Life' magazine, which was regularly read by a quarter of all Americans.

The image in the top right-hand corner represents Fleming's petri dish.

Thanks to PENICILLIN
...He Will Come Home !
