General Marking Guidance

- All candidates must receive the same treatment. Examiners must mark the first candidate in exactly the same way as they mark the last.
- Mark schemes should be applied positively. Candidates must be rewarded for what they have shown they can do rather than penalised for omissions.
- Examiners should mark according to the mark scheme not according to their perception of where the grade boundaries may lie.
- There is no ceiling on achievement. All marks on the mark scheme should be used appropriately.
- All the marks on the mark scheme are designed to be awarded. Examiners should always award full marks if deserved, i.e. if the answer matches the mark scheme. Examiners should also be prepared to award zero marks if the candidate's response is not worthy of credit according to the mark scheme.
- Where some judgement is required, mark schemes will provide the principles by which marks will be awarded and exemplification may be limited.
- When examiners are in doubt regarding the application of the mark scheme to a candidate's response, the team leader must be consulted.
- Crossed out work should be marked UNLESS the candidate has replaced it with an alternative response.

Marking instructions

Answers must be credited according to candidates' deployment of material in relation to the qualities outlined in the generic level descriptors, given at the beginning of this mark scheme.

The indicative content below is not prescriptive and candidates are not required to include all the material which is indicated as relevant. Other relevant material not suggested below must also be credited.

Indicative content

Relevant points which support the statement may include:

- The Salt March led to thousands of Indian peasants following Gandhi's advice by breaking the law to collect salt and this was a direct challenge to British law and rule
- The Salt March led to hundreds of peasants being arrested and imprisoned and this was seen as unjust and further evidence of harsh British rule
- The Salt March led to further action in the form of strikes, protests and civil disobedience organised by provincial committees and the British were unable to stop them.

Relevant points which counter the statement may include:

- The Round Table Conferences assisted in the development towards independence, e.g. the First Round Table Conference decided that India would be run as a 'dominion', which was a political development towards independence
- The passage of the Government of India Act (1935) divided India into 11 provinces which would control all aspects of Indian life, and this aided the development of independence
- The passage of the Government of India Act (1935) abolished the dyarchy and gave each province a legislative assembly, which was a significant development towards independence
- The outcome of the 1937 elections was that the success of the Congress Party made it a significant partner in government with the Raj
- The declaration of war with Germany by the British government angered many Indians and gave Hindus and Muslims a chance to push their cause for independence.
