Source A

We spoke this morning about the unbelievable human ability to endure and survive. The horror of our existence: the fear of every knock at the door, abuse, shame, hunger, restrictions, daily approaching dangers, every day new victims all around, absolute helplessness. And yet we still have easier hours, reading, working and eating. Then, once again, one hopes.

An extract from the diary of Victor Klemperer, from May 1942. He was Jewish and his wife was Aryan. He had been Professor of Literature at Dresden University until the mid-1930s.

Source B

Let us all pull ourselves together and think about how we can do more. Let us reject everything unnecessary to the war effort, and talk less of war and just wage war. Let us be polite and agreeable to each other, following the example of our soldiers by showing a good attitude in all situations. Let us accept the difficulties of each day with calmness and good humour, and let nothing upset us.

An extract from an article written by Joseph Goebbels. The article was published in a national newspaper in March 1942.

3

- 5 'The Nazis were successful in their aim of creating a National Community in Germany between 1933 and 1939.'

How far do you agree?
