I believe that all Christian people should obey me, the representative of God. My power has been granted by God. All Christians are released from the oath which they have made to him. I forbid anyone to serve him as king.

[An extract from the Banning and Dethronement of Henry IV, a papal instruction issued by Pope Gregory VII, 1076]

QUESTION 3

Study the interpretations below and then answer the question which follows.

Interpretation 1

The Crusades were produced by the religious and military spirit which prevailed in Europe during the Middle Ages. The love of arms and religious fervour were two dominant passions. These two great principles acted together, gave birth to the Holy War and carried, among the Crusaders, valour and heroism of character to the highest degree. The Crusades were a most noble, worthy cause.

[Joseph François Michaud, a French historian, writing in his book The History of the Crusades, published in 1840. Michaud travelled to Syria and Egypt as part of his research.]

Interpretation 2

The Crusaders were not guided by any religious commands or principles. The Crusaders came under the pretence of freeing the Holy Sepulchre from infidels and non-believers. Some went to defend their reputation, while others sought to acquire new land and build an empire. The Crusades were driven by aggression and greed and are a stain on European history.

[Muhammad al-Makhzoumy, a professor of history, in an interview for the programme The Crusades: An Arab perspective, broadcast on Al Jazeera television in 2016]

Do the interpretations support the view that the Crusades were a worthy cause? [10]

[In your answer you should refer to how and why the interpretations may differ. Use your own knowledge and understanding of the wider historical debate over this issue to reach a well-supported judgement.]

QUESTION 4

Study the sources below and then answer the question which follows.

Source C

The French were easily persuaded to leave their fields, since France had, for several years, suffered civil war, famine and sickness. Common people and many nobles said that as well as God's summons, they had been called to the land of promise by prophets who appeared among them. Many confessed they had been persuaded to join the Crusade through a lack of money.

[Fulcher of Chartres, in his History of the Expedition to Jerusalem, written 1101–1106. He took part in the First Crusade and served as priest to Baldwin.]

Source D

We have heard that many of you have felt the longing to go to Jerusalem in order to help your Christian brothers against the Turks and Arabs. This pleases us greatly. If any of you go only for the salvation of your souls and to liberate the Church in the East, we will forgive your sins, because you will have risked your belongings and lives for the love of God and your neighbour.

[An extract from a letter written by Pope Urban II to his followers in Bologna, 19 September 1096]

Which of the sources is more useful to an historian studying the reasons why people went on the Crusades? [11]

[You should refer to both sources in your answer and use your knowledge and understanding of the historical context.]
