Source A

[Musical entertainment in the 13th century]

Source B

[Musical entertainment in the 19th century]

QUESTION 2

Study Sources D and E below and answer the question which follows.

Source D

It was a very pleasant sport to see ... the nimbleness of the dogs and the force of the bear tearing after them ... biting and roaring, tossing and tumbling with the blood hanging about its body.

[Adapted from a letter describing bear baiting at Kenilworth Castle in the presence of Queen Elizabeth I in 1575. The letter was written by Robert Laneham, a royal official, to a friend and fellow nobleman.]

Source E

I hold in my hand a list of fifty-two petitions from towns around the country calling for an end to the cruelty inflicted on unfortunate animals. Such spectacles have a devilish effect upon the morals of men. It is the duty of parliament to put an end to such cruelty.

[Adapted from a speech by Joseph Pease, MP, to the House of Commons in 1835 supporting the abolition of bear baiting. Pease was a Quaker and member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.]

Which of the two sources is the more reliable to an historian studying cruelty as entertainment over time? [6]

[In your answer you should refer to the content and authorship of the sources and use your own knowledge and understanding of the wider historical context.]
