Section A

Answer all questions.

Researchers conducted an experiment to investigate the ability of ten males and ten females to recognise emotions displayed on the face. A set of 12 photographs of the same person displaying the six primary emotions (happiness, sadness, anger, surprise, fear and disgust) was used. Participants had ten seconds to look at each photograph and had to identify the emotion displayed before moving onto the next. One mark was awarded for each correct response, giving a total out of 12.
