Sources for use with Section A.

Source 1: From the Nazi Party (NSDAP) election manifesto, September 1930. The manifesto formed the basis of their national campaign.

The victory of the National Socialist movement will mean the overcoming of the old classes. It will allow a nation once more to rise up. It will train this nation to have an iron determination. It will overcome democracy and reassert the authority of personality. It will restore justice to the German people by not allowing the biggest criminals to go unpunished. 5

The other parties may agree with the thievery of the inflation and may recognise the fraudulent revolution of 1918 but National Socialism will not. We will bring the thieves and traitors to justice. With our victory, we will purge the German state of the parasites who are a burden on the nation. National Socialism will guarantee the economic protection of the German people. 10
We will protect the peasant through the ruthless education of our people to consume our own products. The rich will also have to learn to eat black bread to avoid importing foreign wheat. We will emphasise our national honour and national pride by avoiding all that is foreign and giving preference to the results of our own hard work. 15

We want to ensure that in future the importance of our nation once again compares to its natural worth rather than the pathetic representation of the past fifteen years. The National Socialist movement is not fighting a short-term campaign. The path on which it has embarked may be a long one but victory will lie at the end. 20

Source 2: From the diary of Luise Solmitz. Solmitz was a retired schoolteacher, married to a Jew, but a regular attendee at National Socialist rallies. Here she describes a rally in Hamburg during an election campaign in April 1932.

There was immaculate order and discipline, although the police left the whole square to the Nazis and stood aside. Nobody spoke of 'Hitler' always just 'the Führer', 'the Führer says', 'the Führer wants', and what he said and wanted seemed right and good. The hours passed and expectations rose. Loudspeakers were tested. 'The Führer is coming!' A ripple of anticipation went through the crowds. Around the speaker's platform, I could see hands raised in the Hitler salute. There were 120,000 of all ages and classes present. There stood Hitler in a simple black coat and looked over the crowd. A forest of swastika flags swished up, the jubilation of the crowd was clear from the roaring cheer. 25

Hitler's main theme was that out of the many different parties we must grow a nation, the German nation. He criticised the system of government in Germany. He said 'on the way here Socialists confronted me with a poster telling me to turn back but I said no. Thirteen years ago, I was a simple unknown soldier but I knew the way ahead. I never turned back. Nor shall I turn back now.' Otherwise, he made no personal attacks, nor any promises, vague or definite. When the speech was over, there was roaring enthusiasm and applause. Hitler saluted and left. 30 35

It is clear that many look up to him with touching faith as their helper, their saviour, their deliverer from unbearable distress. It is Hitler who rescues the Prussian prince, the scholar, the clergyman, the farmer, the worker and the unemployed. It is Hitler who rescues them and brings them back to the nation. 40
